2009 CONFERENCE RECAP

Thank You

The theme of this year's inaugural conference was "Your Wow Factor" and all we can say is "WOW!" By all accounts, Blogalicious 2009 was a success. From the attendance, to the location, sessions, sponsors, and social events, the weekend was better than we imagined. We are overflowing with appreciation for the energy and excitement that radiated during the conference and continues on the blogs and tweets gathered from all parts of the web. We already miss what feels like old friends and we cannot wait until next year when we will meet again in Miami.

We hope that you will stay connected with us and become a part of the Blogalicious community. You can find out about upcoming conference details at: www.BlogaliciousWeekend.com.

We want next year to be even more successful and as we've done throughout our planning, we want to hear from you because this is as much your conference as it is ours. We hope that you would take a few minutes to complete a survey and share your thoughts with us.

Surpassing Expectations

When we set out to host this year's conference, we aimed for 150 conference attendees to keep the weekend intimate and personal. Our reason for keeping it intimate was to unite bloggers and marketers so that they could develop relationships, relax and absorb quality information in a friendly atmosphere. Although we were thrilled to reach our cap of 150 attendees, we still had many pleading to come. Thanks to our generous sponsors, we were able to accommodate additional registrants and we are overjoyed to report that Blogalicious 2009 hosted 177 attendees; including a handful of men!

Surpassing our expectations for our inaugural conference is just one indication of our success. We are already in the planning stages for Blogalicious 2010 and based on your reviews, we expect to have another sold out event in 2010.
